

Though the authorities are trying to clear people from living on the dump in Phnom Penh it is still surrounded by a very poor area. The local pastor gave us the use of his church so the One to One team could visit and provide care. The re-used corrugated roof sheeting had many holes in it and would not have been much fun in the rainy season. The main problem for the minister was the noise of the rain and he prayed God would provide them with a new roof. When it was almost 40 degrees outside in the sun, it seemed even hotter in that little building.

On this trip I was joined by Joanna Niciejewska from the Bayhead Dental clinic who helped supervise the students as well as treat the local children. While the children waited to see the dental team they had their heads de-iced and they also had bible stories which they all enjoyed.
